Published in the interest of the residents of Champion and District.

You know folks it just seems to me that some of our Champion amateur talent could not come in contact with the real Major Haves. It just occurred to me when we were watching that programme that it is a pity that some of the youngsters could not get a hearing where winning a prize would mean a little more to them. How do you feel? The same way of course you do, alright let's all help to promote more of this local talent.

Our supply of formaldehyde is here and a lot of it is batted up waiting to kill your snout. Oh yes, the price is the best in a long time.

We are not sure if Harry Newhouse was really sick or just couldn't stand the pressure of becoming a grandpa. However he's progressing nicely.

Do not overlook our wonderful display of the newest in Kitchen granite ware. The latest color combination is cream and red you know.

Spring must be very close as Martin Clever has returned from the sunny climes and we saw one of the golf enthusiasts out shooting the golf course gophers.

Oh yes, while we are on the spring subject let's not forget that we have some beautiful patterns in linoleums, both in the roll and in rugs. Our stock of Marshall-Wells stock of Marshall-Wells paints and varnishes is also complete.

Mrs. E. Nelson is in the local hospital. We hope to see you around again soon Mary.

We realize that the farry Newhouse is an alert cattle holder a conference with himself over every

The Amateur Night Reveals New Talent

Despite what might have been tossed about and distinctly bad roads, the ambitious Amateur Night, sponsored by the Ladies' Aid of Champion, was an unqualified success. A large and appreciative audience filled the Community hall, and greeted with hearty applause the entertainment presented for their approval.

In the Midget Class, Audrey Harris made her debut most acceptably with a song recitation, and Elizabeth Simons sang very sweetly "The Quintuplets' Lullaby." These small performers were rewarded with chocolate bars, and the first prize was divided equally between them.

Group II, ages 6 to 12 years, brought forth young people of amazing promise. First prize went to the trio from Hiawatha school who presented a clever and artistic tap dance—Jane Isaacson, Anne Lee, and Annette Weiss. We hope that these young ladies will often appear on our local programmes. Second prize was awarded to June and Johnnie Anderson for their vivid dramatization of "No, No, A Thousand Times No." Betty and Jane Ashmore won third place with a very pleasing Dutch song and dance.

In Group III, ages 12 to 17 years, Louretta Clever carried off high honors by her tap dancing and whistling. We feel that this form of entertainment may be even further developed, and shall look forward to seeing and hearing from Louretta again in the future. Second place went to Jimmie Brown and Jack Collias for their enterprising and amusing presentation of "Music Goes Round and Round." Marjorie Ditto and Phyllis Chamberlain, the winners of third place, entertained the audience with a most pleasing duet and tap dance.

The one act play, "Pros and Cons," lived up to all expectations. The cast consisted of Mrs. Dupre, as the weeping, hysterical mother; Ada Williamson, the mother of fortune who wrote down the "pros and cons" of matrimony in a little black note-book; Ivah Miller, the abused wife who got her own way in the end—Ooh, quite cleverly; Franklin Cool, the poet husband, on the way to success as a poet—perhaps—but no match for his wife in matrimonial affairs. (However, he may have achieved his desires in regard to the telephone). We felt that the roles were well assigned and that great deal of care and effort had gone into the preparation of what was a most enjoyable dramatic presentation.

In the adult class, Ada Williamson and Don Campbell won first prize with their duet dance, "Easter Parade." This was a particularly pleasing number and was greeted with prolonged applause. Joe McNaughton's fine tenor solo was awarded second place; and third prize went to the High School Quartette, Ada Williamson, Violet Taylor, Barbara Baslin and Geraldine McNaughton, for their harmonious rendering of "Home on the Range."

A violin solo by our guest artist, Dr. Nicol, made a suitable final for a particularly enjoyable evening. Mrs. A. A. Diemer was the lucky recipient of the door prize of $5.00.

It is possible in a short review to mention only the prize winning numbers, but all who took part deserve much credit for the type of entertainment presented. The audience must have been delighted at the array of talent, some of it quite unsuspected, thus discovered. Much credit is due the committee of the Ladies' Aid, convened by Mrs. G. M. Campbell, who brought the undertaking to such a successful conclusion. Thanks are also due the accompanists, and "Major Bowes," whose "All right" added quite a realistic note to such a galaxy of amateur offerings; and finally we must not forget our gratitude to the judges, Miss Schultz, Dr. Nicol and Mr. Hart, whose task was indeed no light one.

What About State Medicine?

State medicine as a solution of the "cost of health" problem is a subject very much in the air in the Western Canadian provinces just now and judging from cumulative public demands it is only a question of time and probably a very short time before state medicine or public health insurance in whole or in part, will be in effect generally in the west.

It is perhaps not surprising that the public mind is rapidly crystallizing in this direction. A number of factors are responsible for this. One of them is the much publicized depression of the past few years. During this period local governments have found it necessary to provide medical and hospital care for a large number of relief recipients and, of course, the cost has had to be passed on to the taxpayers.

In addition to that, very many of these taxpayers have during the past few years found it increasingly difficult to keep pace with growing tax bills and at the same time stand the expense of hospital and medical bills for them selves and other members of their families, for they have found that medical and hospitalization expenses have not declined in proportion to their own incomes.

Further than that all classes of the community are demanding a high standard of medical and hospital service. The hospitals that are best equipped to carry out this demand find that they cannot continue to operate at much less than pre-depression costs because of the difficulty of collecting accounts and the doctors declare that they cannot afford to reduce their fees to a scale commensurate to the pocketbooks of their clients because they, too, find the percentage of income they can collect from paying patients diminishing.

With this situation staring them in the face people generally are turning in the direction of state medicine as a way around these difficulties and the move is receiving support from at least some of the members of the medical profession.

The question, however, is a big one and bristles with many features which deserve full consideration before the plunge is made. While state medicine undoubtedly offers advantages there are some phases which should be dissected with care.

Not the least of these is the question of cost and how it is to be distributed. In other words who is to provide the means and from what sources. It would also be the question of freedom to ascertain with reasonable certainty that the advantages which the most enthusiastic advocates of state medicine claim for it can be realized in full degree before a complete scheme is made operative and the benefits are likely to be commensurate with the cost.

British Columbia and Alberta governments are both discussing health insurance schemes of more or less provincial scope and considerable pressure is being brought on the Saskatchewan government to adopt a scheme with prospects that other provinces in session adjourn, some consideration will be given to public demands.

The British Columbia plan for partial medical, dental, hospital and dental services for certain specified classes of the community. The total cost is estimated at $7,287,500 a year or $12.50 per person. The amount to be contributed by the provincial government is limited, which may result in curtailment of the benefits and hospital service is limited to 31 days.

The Alberta Health Insurance Act, passed by the former legislature, but not yet brought into operation by proclamation, is based on the local option principle. In other words it can be brought into effect in any district in which the majority of the electors so decree by vote.

The Alberta measure provides for full medical, dental, hospital and nursing services without some of the limitations prescribed in the B.C. plan, but the total estimated expenditure is $14.50 per person per annum, which the district would contribute by local taxation $11.25 and the province $3.25.

Varying estimates have been made of the cost of a full scheme for Saskatchewan ranging from $3,305,000 to $6,780,000 for a service exclusive for farmers and members of their families, the latter figure being quoted by the rural municipal organizations, provided a similar plan to that proposed in Alberta was adopted.

Even on the basis of the latter total expenditure, the average annual cost per municipality, it was found, would be $2,247, involving a municipal tax levy for that purpose alone, above or below ten mills depending upon assessment and population.

With these figures in mind and remembering the depleted state of provincial and municipal treasuries and the difficulty of collecting taxes under conditions which have existed in recent years it would appear reasonable to suppose that the complete scheme would be financially unworkable without some assistance from the Federal government or unless some other source of revenue than the land within the province adopting such measure can be found.

Taking all circumstances into consideration it might be wise, if the adventure is to be made, to try it out on an experimental basis, either by applying a complete scheme to a group of municipalities or district with the provincial government guaranteeing a deficit or by applying a partial service to an entire province. A test on some such basis would yield practical information as to when and how far further extensions could safely be made.

Child Slept Through Fire

"Deep in the Sleep" might well be the title of this little story. John Anderson celebrated his election as chief of the volunteer fire brigade at Anchorage, Alaska, by sleeping through the first fire. The station alarm aroused the whole town but not the chief, just a block away. His wife, a night telephone operator on duty, couldn't raise him either.

Would Scrap Auto Horns

Not Needed With Good Drivers
Opinion of Careful Driver

I have been closely connected with the building of automobiles and everything that goes with them for more than 30 years. I have driven over all the United States and Canada and never had an accident. Never had a traffic violation ticket or any kind. Most likely, I believe that I am competent and qualified to ask questions.

Why not scrap the horn and remove it from all cars except police, fire trucks and ambulances? The horn has proved to be a menace and everyone would be better off without it.

The brake takes the place of the horn on my car at all times. For any argument in favor of the horn, my answer is: Press on the brake first.—Letter in Detroit Free Press.

With regard to the export of live poultry from Canada to the United States, there is no money charged on property marked return crates, but a duty of 30 cents per crate is charged Canadian shippers on the return of their crates into Canada. MAKE YOUR OPPORTUNITY

What with more employment about, more trade, and more money to spend, now's the time to make the most of opportunities—for as Shakespeare wrote, "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." This is a time when the opportunity, not wait for it, and if some have the desire, and lack the urge to do so, their stock of nerve force is disastrously low, and they would immediately be in need of the necessary working power level with Phosphoric.

As always, the race is to the strong, and the energizing vitality of Phosphoric makes it the only thing one's own in competition with others. It is a source of mental, physical, and moral strength, and it is the source of the stamina to make your opportunity!

Old House May Be Sold

Late King George Visited It In Halifax 40 Years Ago

Ware House, at Cole Harbor, a few miles from Halifax, which the late King George visited as a Midshipman 40 years ago and which once rung with royal voices, will be advertised for sale and removal unless someone will undertake the expense of restoring the property, the Halifax county council has decided. Years ago the Ware family sold the house and went to the Canadian west. The property was purchased by the County of Halifax and used as a residence for the caretaker of the County's Poor Home, nearby. When the home was burned down, it was abandoned.

Owners Arranged Matter When House Put On Wrong Lot
Milton Brenner, councilman of Pasadena, Calif., went to see a lot he just had purchased and rubbed his eyes.

On the lot was a house and Brenner was certain that two years before there had been no house there. Investigation revealed "a house mover had delivered the house to the wrong address."

It should have been placed on a lot next door, so Mr. Brenner and the house owner just traded their property.

Increases Brain Pressure

Doctors Claim Noise Adds As Much As 400 Per Cent.

Noise increases the pressure on the brain, sometimes as much as 400 per cent., and causes loss of temper, irritability and undue nervousness, a symposium on "The Effect of Noise in Health and Disease" at the New York Academy of Medicine revealed. Experiments at Bellevue hospital which measured brain pressure were described by Dr. Foster Kennedy, professor of neurology at Cornell University Medical College, who found that exploding an inflated paper bag increased the brain pressure to four times normal.

Dr. E. P. Fowler warned that noise of New York City's very loud noises endangered the ear drum of some.

Riel Rebellion Veteran

Man Who Saw Boom Days In West Dies At Halifax

Frederick Leasure, native of Quebec City who went to Canada's west in the day of its boom and became a prominent rancher, died at Halifax recently in the home for aged men at the age of 82.

He was a veteran of the Riel rebellion and his entire property was destroyed in one of its encounters. At the end of the rebellion he returned to Halifax, where his father had brought him in 1873, and remained there the rest of his life.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

—BY—
LAWRENCE A. KEATINGE

SYNOPSIS

The story opens with Link Fleming addressing a meeting of Boone County cattlemen called to discuss the object of forming an irrigation company.

Roper Klago, the boss of the Rawhide and nearby ranges, who seemed to approve the plan, but was really opposed to it, had forced Boak Torney, a derelict mining engineer, who Klago knew would be called upon to give his expert opinion in favor of the scheme, to reverse his earlier endorsement and declare that irrigation in Boone county so far as Fleming's plan was concerned was only a bungled way to waste money.

The meeting terminates, but Buzz Hamilton and his sister, Helen, Link and Klago stay behind and Helen asks Fleming questions about his irrigation plan. This angers Buzz, who accuses Fleming of trying to influence her and she swears to ruin his "spread". Buzz shouts at Fleming in an uncontrollable fit of anger, but Buster Townsend, Link's foreman, is shot in the stomach, and Fleming is arrested. Buzz is arrested and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Helen and Fleming form a partnership to provide irrigation for their own properties.

Fleming goes home and studies the plans drawn by Torney to learn whether they could be adapted to a smaller scheme suitable for his and Helen's land, and is satisfied it could be done. Feeling cold, he lights the fire and there is an explosion that wrecks the house, burns it and the plans and renders Link unconscious. He is rescued from the blaze by an employee.

Helen and Link ride to Rawhide for supplies and to obtain funds to carry out the dam project. They meet Roper, who greets Helen and offers to show with her. Link goes to see the Sheriff, who tells him Buzz Hamilton has been pardoned and would arrive on the incoming stage, that he thinks Link has made a mistake in getting Buzz released.

(Now Go On With The Story)

"No, you lot not. Me and Marty Bush swore off a couple of years ago."

Slowly she wheeled her pistol. "I thought perhaps you meant to try to win money to help us out. Because we are still in danger of being unable to finish the dam, aren't we?" Link avoided her look as he shrugged his shoulders. "Some. But playin' to win means you're sure to lose. No, Helen, I'm stayin' to do a treat that'll never tickle you. Nope, can't tell you now. Wait an hour or two."

He stood in the thick dust watching her ride away. Then with a look of fondness, the source of which was considerably deeper than casual friendship, he started for the spot where Sheriff Stephen stood waiting. "Buzz came on the stage while you were in the bank," the official noted. "I tried to stall but Jackpot Meil and Klago came along and insisted a fuss over Buzz as he insisted he have a drink with 'em. The hull gang is in the Half Moon now."

Pursons grooved Fleming's dark forehead as he surveyed the two-story false front of the saloon. "Doggone it," he exclaimed irritably, "those huns don't care what they do to a youngster. Of course, Buzz is only two years younger than me—his twenty-one. But he seems like a kid, Sheriff, that's got to be watched all the time. This'll be a fine start for a chap just paroled from prison."

"Helen don't know he's here?"

Link shook his head. "I sent her on home. Now," he said reluctantly, starting away, "I've got to separate Buzz from them vultures and get him out to the Triple H. Ames, it might be better if you didn't come on account of Buzz probly saw all the lawmen at prison here cause to see for quite a spell."

"I'll let 'em alone so long as he don't go have another shootin' match. Tell Buzz I said so."

And the link officer moved off. Through a friend at the state capital Link had managed to have Buzz paroled after serving six

Home Of The Future
University Professor Sees It As Vacuum Bottle Type

A house built on the vacuum bottle principle may be the forerunner, a northeastern university professor said, of the air conditioned home of the future.

It was all 14 inches thick, it would never open and its heating system, functions without registers or radiators.

Frederick Stearns, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Boston University, has had it under observation for a year. During that time, he said, because of the automatic air conditioning system built into the dwelling, inside temperature and humidity have remained practically constant regardless of outside conditions.

In the heyday of the Volga river in Russia, 25,000 barges plied the river.

Mothers Aided by Guide to Better Control of Colds

Practical Plan is Helping Families Everywhere to Have Fewer, Milder
and Shorter Colds.

SIMPLE AND EASY TO FOLLOW

Already, thousands of Canadian mothers are benefiting by following Vicks VapoRub for Better Control of Colds—proving for themselves that it is a practical home guide to fewer and shorter colds.

This commonsense, medically sound Plan represents the 30 years' experience of Vicks Chemists in studying colds. It has been tested in extensive clinics by practicing physicians—further proved in everyday home use throughout the country.

Here, briefly, are the three simple steps in Vicks Plan:

1. To Help Build Resistance to Colds. Live normally—avoid excesses. Eat simple food and keep elimination regular. Drink plenty of water. Take much exercise daily—open doors preferably. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

2. To Help Prevent Many Colds. At the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks VapoRub—just a few drops up each nostril. VapoRub is especially designed for the nose and under throat—where most colds start.

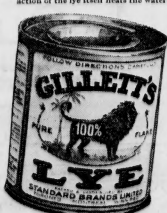

Used in time, VapoRub helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in the early stages.

3. To Help End a Cold Sooner. If a cold develops, or strikes without warning, rub throat and chest at bedtime with Vicks VapoRub. VapoRub acts two ways at once: (1) By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster. (2) By inhalation of its penetrating medicinal vapors, direct to inflamed air passages. Through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action lessens inflammation, relieves break congestion, and Vicks Plan can do for you and your family can be proved only by trying it. Directions for following the Plan come in each package of Vicks VapoRub and Vicks VapoGel.

In Memoriam

In fond and loving memory of my dear mother who passed away March 10th, 1929.

When days are dark and friends are few

Dear Mother how I long for you.

Your memory is as dear to-day.

As in the hour you passed away.

George Smith

Dr. Alexander's lectures on Character Analysis and Psychology attracted large audiences in Campbell's hall last week, and the enthusiasm evoked by young and old is reminiscent of Chautauqua days. The nightly demonstration of phrenology demonstrated on ladies and gentlemen selected by the audience added a thrill to the entertainment. Dr. Alexander has a charming and forcible personality and displays a keen insight into human nature, and his lectures were inspiring besides being full of wit, pathos and humor, and sound common sense. He is a born lecturer, a clever actor and impersonator and fluent and eloquent speaker.

Spring starts to-morrow.

LIBERTY MAGAZINE'S CANADIAN HALL OF FAME No. 19

"All right gentlemen," says Major General J. H. Macbride, chief of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, "they were last seen east of the Arctic River; go and get your men."

The urge to get your man is universally at the R. C. M. P. and is a throw-back to the war time phrase used by the chief commissioner when he used a luckless rifle and carried a sniper's rifle instead of a cane. They still tell in France that General Macbride, when he led the Twelfth Brigade, set an ultimate record for brass balls. He refused to stay in his safe dugout and direct troops and had an idea that a commander's place was in the line with his men.

Now he has a desk in a shabby little office over a department store in Ottawa but soon he will have headquarters in a new $1,200,000 building. When he moves to his new quarters he will take with him a map with little red flags. These flags mark the far-flung outposts of the R. C. M. P., one of them within eleven degrees of the North Pole.

A fine horseman, immediately after his appointment by Premier Bennett he promulgated the dictum that every mountie must be able to ride. He rounded up the desk-warriors sent them to Regina to suffer equitation and eat their meals standing up. Today his men have shut down the rum runners in the Maritime and the dope peddlers of the central provinces; they have checked the drug smuggle on the Pacific coast and the fur stealers of the Northwest.

Major General Macbride was born in Fort Perry, Ontario; has an Irish ancestry, a charming wife and six athletic children.
